Editors Morning Herald—You will please announce that JAMES W SHAW will be a candidate for nomination for the office of Register and Recorder at the ensuing Republican primary election.
Bill SHAW was a private in the army of the Union and lost his right arm in our own State at the battle of Gettysburg. He is competent, prompt and obliging, and has given entire satisfaction to the business public as an officer. Therefore having been disabled in the service of our country, but being well qualified for the position and having the confidence of the business public and community at large as an officer, his renomination will be urged at the primary election.

MANY REPUBLICANS

The Democratic Convention

From the New Haven Palladium, May 7

The Democratic National Committee will meet in New York on Wednesday to take measures for holding their convention. Our neighbor, the Register, counsels a policy of delay, and thinks something may be gained by waiting to see what may turn up. This, however, does not seem to be the general opinion of the leading Democratic press. That the Democrats will hold a convention and make a straight out nomination is inevitable. That there should have been any doubt on the subject shows the thoroughly disorganized condition of a party which always prided itself on its rigid organization. Had Mr Adams or Mr Trumbull been nominated by the Liberal Republicans, there would have been a strong, and probably successful, effort made by the leaders of the Democracy to adopt the ticket. This the nomination of Mr Greeley has made an impossibility. One of the leading Democratic journals reminds the Liberal Republicans that they have changed position with the Democrats, and that the time has now come for them to practice magnanimity. This is a gentle hint that they will be expected to assist the Democratic ticket, either by withdrawing their own, or else by making as great an inroad as they possibly can on the Republican vote. But this is not the entertainment which the Liberal Republicans invited the Democrats to witness. On the contrary, the Democrats were requested by the Liberal Republicans to go on with their dying, and to be very speedy about it. They were asked to attend a funeral, and to furnish the deceased. They endured the advice with commendable meekness, but the Cincinnati pill seems to have had a most beneficial effect on the health of the patient. For the first time in several months the Democracy appear to be cheerful. They are very much in the condition of a gentleman who, having been condemned to the gallows, unexpectedly received a commutation of sentence after the rope had been knotted under his ear. It is eminently appropriate that Mr Greeley, who is strongly opposed to capital punishment, should have been selected as the bearer of the reprieve.

The time and place for their convention designated, they will have the delightful task of hunting up a candidate. Here their choice is limited. It is not probable they will take a Republican, no matter how "liberal" he may be. To have adopted Mr Adams, Mr Trumbull, Judge Davis, or some other possible candidate, who had already obtained a quasi Republican indorsement, would have been an easy matter, but now they have nothing to gain by going outside their own ranks. Had it not been for the exposure of the Tammany frauds, it is not improbable the chance might have fallen upon Governor Hoffman, who has many elements of strength. A few years ago Mr English was a promising candidate, and were he a Western man his chances would be excellent. The probabilities are their candidate will be taken from the West, and the name of Mr Hendricks is looming up prominently. The presidential campaign will be an animated one, for there will be at least three candidates in the field. The contest however, will be confined to the nominees of the Republicans and the Democratic Party lines will be at once formed distinctly, and the issue will be so plain that none can mistake it. The next President will be either the candidate to be nominated at Philadelphia, or the one to be nominated by the Democrats. Mr Greeley is quite as likely to draw strength from the Democrats as he is from the Republicans, and, indeed, if we may form an opinion from the way in which his nomination has been spoken of by a portion of the Democratic press, he is more likely to hurt the former. None of the Liberal Republican organs have given him a hearty endorsement, or cared to hide their chagrin at the result of the Cincinnati convention, while several of the journals which, though not fully committed to the movement, nevertheless sympathized with it, denounce him bitterly. It is strange satire upon his whole career, that Mr Greeley, who of all men in public life is most opposed to the political theories of the Democratic party, should be the man selected to resuscitate it at a moment when some of his friends were willing to see it expire.

The Democrats Will Not Support Greeley—Why Should They?

Special Dispatch to the Evening Post, May 9

WASHINGTON May 8.—Some of Mr Greeley's supporters have been engaged in an attempt to manufacture public sentiment in favor of his nomination by circulating reports that several of the most prominent leaders of the Democratic Party have openly declared that they will support him and urge the National Democratic Convention to do the same. Among the names used to further this scheme were those of Geo H Pendleton and Ex-Senator Hendricks, of Indiana.

This morning a prominent Democratic Congressman received a letter from Ex-Senator Hendricks, in which he says unqualifiedly that he does not approve of Mr Greeley's nomination, and would regard his election as a public calamity. He further adds that the Cincinnati Convention was a mere fiasco. Mr Hendricks says that he observes that John D Defrees telegraphed to Mr Greeley that he (Hendricks) would support him in Indiana, but that was done without his (Hendricks') authority. Mr Hendricks favors the regular Democratic nomination, and believes that that ticket can be elected.

George H Pendleton telegraphs this morning to some Congressmen that he has not committed himself to Mr Greeley's nomination, but expects to abide the decision of the National Convention, which will nominate a regular Democratic ticket. A representative who has made a careful canvass among the Democrats in the House and Senate says that not one Democrat in ten is in favor of Mr Greeley. The feeling is almost unanimous in nominating a regular ticket. A prominent Southern Democrat says that just at the present time Mr Greeley seems very popular in the South, but when the sober second thought comes, and the people reflect that he has supported every measure advocated by President Grant and has favored the continuance of the Kuklux law, and of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus of the Southern States, a reaction will set in, and Mr Greeley will be far from popular. This Democrat adds that during the late war the Southern people lost everything but their honor, and that they would lose that, if they supporting the Cincinnati nominee.

Children of the Sawdust.

HOW CIRCUS APPRENTICES ARE TREATED AND HOW THEY ARE TAUGHT THEIR BUSINESS

Many of our readers, we fancy, have often seen and admired the pretty children whose graceful performances in the circus ring are always, to very many people, by far the most pleasing part on of the entertainment. There is, however, a popular belief that these children are cruelly treated to make them learn these various tricks, which some suppose to be hurtful to the infant frame. As this consideration of course det nots much from the pleasure that tender-hearted people would otherwise feel in witnessing the performances, we would say that the fact is that the young child is taught to do in the ring are almost the same thing that nine out of ten healthy children are continually doing on the green sward or on the carpeted floors of the parental parlors. Your own little boy—dear, kind hearted madam, who gazes so pitifully at the little circus children—if he is a healthy and well developed young chap, will stand on his head, with his boots in the air or pitch himself head-over-heels a hundred times a day—thus keeping himself topsy turvey half his waking hours—if only he has got some place where he can do it and not hurt himself. What your boy does is almost precisely what is done by the circus children, and they are taught to accomplish their feats in the most easy and graceful way.

The cruelty is a thing of the past, and the sufferings of gymnastic and equestrian apprentices of the present day are purely suppositious.

The children of the ring are put into training as soon as they can fairly walk, though in these days it is not usual to see a boy of less than five or six years introduced in public in the acrobatic business. In the case of equestrians, however, the case is different—some ambitious riders bringing their off-spring before the public much younger than this.

The first acts in which the little ones are allowed to appear before an audience are what are technically known as "acrobatic or "tumbling" scenes. Those who which these performances carefully will notice that the youngest ones of the party have very little to do, save to stand in the proper position, and receive an occasional toss from the senior member of the group, which toss or throw sometimes looks as if very carelessly administered, but which in reality is done with the greatest care and gentleness. In fact the modern system of teaching the business by emulation, instead of by threats and blows, makes the youngest so ambitious that they are always begging to be taught new acts, and mine out of ten of the trifling falls they get in the ring are brought on by the attempt to accomplish more than they are really at the time capable of achieving. The love of applause is inborn with us all, and jealously sometimes so rankles in the baby bosoms of these spangled little ones that they would, if unchecked in their mad career, often break their tiny little necks in trying to outdo each other. To many ambitious young actors the greatest possible known punishment is being debarred the privilege of appearing with his exultant companions in starred and tinseled finery, and exhibiting his hard-earned accomplishments to the applauding multitude. Most of the children in the profession at present are the offspring of performers, who are not afraid to have them taught the business as the teaching is now done. Formerly many "circus actors," particularly the mothers, would rather have laid their little ones in their coffins than see them brought up to the business of their parents. Remembering the blows and stripes of their own apprenticeship, few mothers could bear the thought of dying and leaving their tender babes exposed to the brutality of which they themselves had such sad experience.

In gymnastics the youngest are first taught some simple posturing and the dancing positions, then comes what is technically known as the "split," which consists in spreading the feet apart till the legs are exactly right angles with the upright body, a feat which any lissome lad or lass of six years or less can do almost without practice. Next they are taught "bending," which means to throw the head back as far as possible toward the heels, this being learned, a grown person places his hand under the back of the youngster, when a slight toss, by throwing the feet over his head, transforms the "bend into a "somersault." When the child has mastered the backward and forward "somersault," the hardest of his education as a "tumbler" is over. The other feats come easily by practice—"vaulting," "bareback flaps," "spring board somersaults," "flip flaps," "hand-springs" "cartwheels," and the like are learned in a few months.

If the young person, either male or female, is to learn the tight rope business, he or she is not as one might suppose, exercised at first on a low rope stretched near the ground. On the contrary, the pupil is placed at once on the rope at as great an elevation as is required by the regular performances, and from the very first learns the business as it must afterwards be done. There are two reasons for this—first, it accustoms the novice at once to the height, and, second, it gives space for the employment of the balance pole, a long bar of twelve of twenty feet in length, and which, were the rope stretched low, would constantly embarrass the learner by striking the ground on either side. As it is absolutely necessary to future success that the performer should be perfectly bold and self-possessed, and not become timid by reason of hurts received in the falls which are first unavoidably many, men are stationed on either side of the rope, into whose overready arms the youngster falls, and so never comes to serious grief, however frequent are the tumbles.

When children first essay to ride alone, a heavy leather belt is buckled round the waist, from this belt a long and strong cord passes through a ring in the top of the pad or saronglo, and the free end is held in the hand of the ring-master. If, being thus protected, young master loses his feet, an instantaneous pull upon the cord draws him flat down on the back of the horse, and by no stretch of infantile ingenuity can he get under the animal's heels.

The apprentices frequently learn to ride the "pony act," in which the tiny pattern of a man dressed as a jockey or a courier urges his steed with his shrill cries and many wavings of his little cap. This act is always ridden on two ponies, and the young rider will contrive to slip and fall be woon his miniature steeds, while a thrill of horror pervades the crowd, who applaud most lustily when, the next minute, the plucky little fellow regains his feet, picks up the reins and drives on faster than ever. The compassionate audience need not waste their sympathies, however, this fall is merely one of the "tricks of the trade," introduced simply for "effect," and the cord, before described would not let the rider fall if he wanted to. On the whole, the improvement in the manner of training children for this sort of life is marked and commendable. It is not a business to which every parent would care to bring up his little ones, but after all, "people must be amused," and every one of these circus children is a thousand times better off in having an honest, though perhaps humble trade, than are the thousands of miserable little waifs that swarm in our streets and alleys, whose present condition is utter poverty, and whose surest expectation of a rise in life is grounded upon the hopes of a future of successful and undetected thievery.

One word more. Many persons suppose that "circus riders" are invariably and invariably given to drunkenness and dissipation. Never was there a more unjust supposition. There are black sheep everywhere, but there is quite as great a proportion of true, honest wives, kindly, loving brothers and faithful husbands in this as in any other line of life. Their misfortune in this regard is the same as that of the theatrical profession, viz, that owing to their public lives every scandal in their ranks is known and magnified, while people in quieter walks of life may perhaps be ten times more licentious and yet not one tenth as notorious.

The artist who has to back a fiery horse at night, or do a trapeze performance at a height so great that a fall from his giddy perch would be almost certain death, is not likely to shake his nerve or lose his grip by the use of intoxicating liquors, so there are few instances of habitual drunkenness among this class of professionals.

An Awkward Mistake.

CONSEQUENCES OF INDISTINCT WRITING.

A curious story was current in West End circles some years ago. The Duke of Wellington received a note which he believed emanated from the Bishop of London, requesting permission "to sketch the Waterloo breeches." The Duke, though both alarmed and surprised, immediately ordered the "small clothes" to be forwarded to St. James square, with the following characteristic epistle: "F M the Duke of Wellington presents his compliments to the Bishop of London, and is not aware that the breeches he wore on the occasion of the battle of Waterloo differ materially from many other pairs in his Grace's possession, but they are very much at the Bishop's service, and he can make any use of them he thinks proper." The Bishop's consternation on receipt of the above, with its accompanying parcel, had the effect of inducing him immediately to order his carriage and drive to the Prime Minister with this sad proof of the wreck of his Grace's mental powers, whilst the "Duke," on the other hand, mounted his horse and rode to the residence of the Lord Chancellor with a similar announcement in respect to the Bishop, pronouncing the note he had that morning received. On a closer examination it was discovered that the writer was not the Bishop of London, but "Mrs Loudon," daughter of the great landscape gardener, and herself an artist of some celebrity, asking his Grace's permission to sketch not the "Waterloo breeches," but a clump of trees at Strathfieldsaye, known as the "Waterloo beeches." The Duke had mistaken "London" for "Loudon," the Bishop's usual signature, the initials being, singularly enough, the same in both cases.—Miner's Journal

BILLS APPROVED.

WASHINGTON, May 10.

The President approved the following bills: To regulate the elections in Washington and Idaho Territories. For the relief of Robert Williams, jr., Collector of the Third district of Ohio. For the relief of the purchase of lands sold for direct taxes in insurrectionary States. For the relief of G. S. Baker, Mayville, Mo. For the re-issue of certain bonds. To extend time of payment for their lands by persons holding pre-emption on public lands in Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and Dakotah Territory. To perpetuate testimony in the courts of the United States. To change the time for holding Circuit and District courts of the Western district of Wisconsin at La Crosse.

A special says: The President will be advised to-day of a plan to defeat his nomination, devised by Morton, to the effect that Grant is only an obstacle to the success of the Republican party, and in order to secure the election of the nominees of the Philadelphia Convention, the delegates must unite for Senator Morton.

DISCHARGED SOLDIERS.

By an order from the War Department soldiers are authorized to make such arrangement as will insure to discharged soldiers transportation and subsistance to their homes.

THE SENATE ARMS COMMITTEE

held a final meeting to-day and agreed on a report. The committee express their satisfaction at the refusal of Senators Sumner and Schurz to testify in regard to certain matters touching the investigation, and state that, notwithstanding the protest of Senator Sumner, to which they have given due consideration, the committee cannot doubt that the subpœna was properly issued to him, and that he was bound to obey it and to testify before the committee, and that his refusal to answer the questions which were put to him cannot be justified. The committee find that the amounts received for the sale of ordnance stores, $9,409,307 for the fiscal year ending June 20, 1871, were regularly paid into the treasury, and they discover nothing in these transactions which reflects dishonor either upon the government or any of the officials connected therewith. All sales were made with results favorable to the government, and there was nothing in the conduct of the Secretary of War or his subordinates deserving censure in this respect. The committee find the sales of arms and military stores were not made under such circumstances as to violate the obligations of our government as a neutral power, and there is not the slightest foundation for supposition that any officer of the Government or War Department derived any advantage by these sales. The Committee feel bound as an act of justice to exonerate General Rufus Ingalls from any improper connection with these transactions; neither do they find anything impeaching the business integrity of the Ringmans. The committee say the testimony shows Marquis De Chambrun is the source of all the aspersions thrown upon our government, and suspicions cast upon officials. It is difficult to ascertain precisely the purpose for which he desired this investigation, but it is certain he labored constantly and unremittingly to bring it about. At times he seem d to have been intriguing in the interest of the French government and at others acting as agent of his relative, Victor Place, formerly Consul General of France at New York. Had Senators Sumner and Schurz appeared in the War Department and Treasury they would have made their way and traced no violation of the law of nations in these sales. But in the case Commerson would have failed in his efforts to use the Senate as an instrument to vindicate his friend, Placard, from an order on the Executive Department of the government. Finally, this investigation was moved, first, on a statement that a certain resolution had been adopted in France; second, on misapprehension as to the state of accounts between the two executive departments of our Government, and, third, a totally unfounded suspicion as to the conduct of the War Department in making sales. It is now ascertained that such supposed resolution never was passed, and that the other two grounds had no existence in fact, as might easily have been discovered by the Senators who moved and supported this resolution of inquiry. In other words, the resolution was based on one falsehood, one misapprehension, and one unfounded suspicion, and would not have been moved at all had the Senators imitated the wisdom and prudence which marked the course of Senator Pomeroy.

The committee also inquired whether French loading muskets or other munitions of war had been transformed into French orders were not sold by the War Department in such large numbers as seriously to impair the defensive capacity of the country in time of war, and other questions of the same nature. The committee say on this subject:

There can be no doubt that the government would sell a million of muskets if they could be raised and organized to receive arms. The committee therefore report that the sales under consideration have not seriously impaired the defensive capacity of the country in time of war.

Senator Stevenson will present his dissenting views.

The committee then took up the tariff and tax bill.

Mr. Kerr moved to reduce the duty on pig from to $5 00 per ton.

After a long discussion, a vote was taken and Kerr's motion rejected.

Mr Cox moved to reduce the duty to $3 50 and on that amendment a discussion was resumed and continued at considerable length, and was rejected.

Mr. Burdett moved to make the duty $6 50.

Mr. Dawes remarked that in placing pig iron under ten per cent. reduction the clause would make the duty $6 50 a ton, which at present cost of iron in England was 14 per cent. ad valorem.

Adjourned.

SENATE.

Mr. Sumner introduced anew his supplementary civil rights bill and moved to have it passed on the calender.

Mr. Bayard moved to refer it to the Committee on Judiciary.

At expiration of the morning hour, the bill was ordered printed and placed on the calendar subject to a motion to refer.

Mr. Cole offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of War for all information in his possession bearing to the use of Goat Island for naval purposes.

The resolution went over.

Mr. Wilson called up the bill authorizing the issue of one thousand breech loading arms to inhabitants of Montana for defense against Indians. Passed.

Mr. Kellogg called up the Louisiana election bill.

After disultory political discussion the bill was passed.

The Senate then held a brief executive session, after which the open session was resumed, and the bill to amend the enforcement act was taken up.

The act provides for the appointment of supervisors of election at Congressional election in each voting precinct and where a request is made for such by two citizens.

In the discussion which ensued, Mr Kellogg referred to State officials and other Liberal Republicans from Louisiana who attended the Cincinnati convention, as the thieves and rascals who had oppressed and plundered the state, and said it was they, with rag, tag and bobtail from other States, who had turned the whole into the convention.

Mr. Cassegra—I will ask the Senator would state whether those persons who he denounces committed the outrages which he alleges before or after they became liberalized. [Laughter]

Mr. Kellogg—Before and after.

Mr. Kellogg again intimated that many of the delegates to the Cincinnati Convention for other States were no better than those from Louisiana, and he called on the Senators from Georgia and Texas to tell who the men were that assumed to represent these States in the Convention.

Mr. Hamilton, of Texas—I can say for the delegates from Texas that there was not a carpet-bagger among them. [Laughter]

Without action on the bill, the Senate adjourned.

He declared himself for the preservation of the organization of the Democratic party.

The Committee feel bound as an act of justice to exonerate General Rufus Ingalls from any improper connection with these transactions; neither do they find anything impeaching the business integrity of the Remingtons. The committee say the testimony shows Marquis De Chambrun is the source of all the aspersions thrown upon our government, and suggests one cause upon officials. It is difficult to ascertain precisely the purpose for which he desired this investigation, but it is certain he labored constantly and successfully to bring it about. At times he seems to have been participating in the interest of the French government and at others acting as agent of his relative, Victor Place, formerly Consul General of France at New York. But in this case Chambrun would have failed in his efforts to use the Senators as instruments in the vindication his friend, Placard, thought proper in the Executive Departments of the government. Finally, the investigation was moved, first, on a statement that a certain resolution had been adopted in France; second, on misapprehension as to the state of accounts between the two executive departments of our Government, and, third, a totally unfounded suspicion as to the conduct of the War Department in making sales. The committee also inquired whether French leading muskets or other muskets made of being transformed into breech loaders were not sold by the War Department in such large numbers as materially to impair the defensive capacity of the country in time of war, and after quoting the act touching on the subject say:

There can be no doubt that the government could arm a million of men as fast as they could be raised and organized to receive arms. The committee believe that the sales made under consideration have not seriously impaired the defensive capacity of the country in time of war.

THE LEGISLATURE.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 10

In the Senate Gleason's bill for an elevated railroad in the city of New York, passed. The bill making the John Brown Park a State park, was lost.

Congressional Proceedings.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, May 10.

A number of private bills were reported, and acted on in the morning hour.

The House went into Committee of the Whole on the fortification bill. It appropriates $1,985,000. Passed.

The committee then took up the tariff and tax bill.

Mr. Kerr moved to reduce the duty on pig iron to $5 00 per ton.

After a long discussion, a vote was taken and Kerr's motion rejected.

Mr. Cox moved to reduce the duty to $3 50 and on that amendment a discussion was resumed and continued at considerable length, and was rejected.

Mr. Burdett moved to make the duty $6 50.

Mr. Dawes remarked that in placing pig iron under ten per cent. reduction the clause would make the duty $6 30 a ton, which at present cost of iron in England was 14 per cent ad valorem.

Adjourned.

SENATE.

Mr. Sumner introduced anew his supplementary civil rights bill and moved to have it placed on the calendar.

Mr. Bayard moved to refer it to the Committee on Judiciary.

At expiration of the morning hour, the bill was ordered printed and placed on the calendar subject to a motion to refer.

Mr. Colfax offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of War for all information in his possession bearing to the use of Gun Island for railroad purposes.

The resolution went over.

Mr. Wilson called up the bill authorizing the issue of one thousand breech loading arms to inhabitants of Montana for defense against Indians. Passed.

Mr. Kellogg called up the Louisiana election bill.

After disturbing political discussion the bill was passed.

The Senate then held a brief executive session, after which the open session was resumed, and the bill to amend the enforcement act was taken up.

The act provides for the appointment of supervisors of election at Congressional election in each voting precinct and where a request is made for such by two citizens.

In the discussion which ensued, Mr. Kellogg referred to State officials and other Liberal Republicans from Louisiana who attended the Cincinnati convention, as the thieves and rascals who had oppressed and plundered the state, and said it was they, with rag, tag and bob-tail from other States, who had turned the destinies to the convention.

Mr. Cassidy—I wish the Senator would state whether those persons whom he denounces committed the outrages which he alleges before or after they became liberalized. [Laughter.]

Mr. Kellogg—Before and after.

Mr. Kellogg again intimated that many of the delegates to the Cincinnati Convention for other States were no better than those from Louisiana, and he called on the Senators from Georgia and Texas to state who the men were that assumed to represent these States in the Convention.

Mr. Hamilton, of Texas—I can say for the delegates from Texas that there was not a carpet-bagger among them. [Laughter.]

Without action on the bill, the Senate adjourned.

From Nashville.

DELEGATES FOR BALTIMORE.

NASHVILLE, May 10

The Democratic State Convention closed its labors last evening. A full delegation to Baltimore was appointed, and Wm A. Quarles and J. M. Fleming elected presidential electors for the Second district. The former is a Democrat, the latter a Whig. Delegates from several Congressional districts chose district electors. All remaining Democratic districts will put electors in, when there will be a full Democratic electoral ticket in the field.

THE LIBERAL REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION

meets in this city on the 20th. The Executive Committee suggested to it the appointment of a Liberal electoral ticket. Whether this will be done, now that the Democratic convention has endorsed the Cincinnati ticket, is a matter of speculation.

To-day, just before the close of the Democratic convention, Governor Brown appeared and made a speech in which he admitted that the Democratic party were in the minority and could not succeed in itself, and approved the action of the Convention in relation to the Cincinnati nominations, and expressed his belief that success would crown their efforts. He desired honor for the preservation of the organization of the Democratic party.

FIRE.

NEW YORK, May 10.

At 3 o'clock this morning a fire broke out in Paul Lee's clothing store, Mercer and Wooster, loss $20,000 on building, and $20 000 on stock, fully insured.

T. BUCHANAN REPD

improved his condition to-day and hopes are not formed of his recovery.

CONSIDERABLE EXCITEMENT

was created in Jersey City by unloading a cargo of mixed sugars from the ship Cordenoe from various towns in Italy. The bales were broken open and emptied on adjacent wharf, which drove men away. The Health Inspector will not permit any carried to be unloaded. The health authorities of New York and Brooklyn already refused to permit rags to be landed.

A Washington special says: Information reached the Navy Department that the Marie Cotte Golden cuirasses to the Havana harbor is being strengthened and fifteen inch guns pointing seaward are now in position.

RADICAL REFORMERS

A convention of radical reformers was held to-day, for the purpose of adopting a platform and considering the nomination for the Presidency and Vice Presidency. J. D. Sargent was chosen President of the convention, and Mr. Middlebrook, of Connecticut, one of a number of Vice Presidents. A resolution was adopted declaring the two great principles of government are order and freedom, and that woman suffrage is necessary to secure a truly republican government. It was decided that candidates for President and Vice President may be chosen from either sex.

THE CARPENTERS.

The strike of carpenters in Brooklyn continues. The bosses held a meeting and agreed to the eight hour system, to take effect Sept. first, but this conclusion is unsatisfactory.

NOT GUILTY.

Richard Christie, aged thirteen, was tried in Brooklyn to-day, for the murder of Wm. Weiss, a playmate. The evidence showed the killing of Wells was accidental, and the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

EMMA COUCH

was held in $5 000 bail for blackmailing Rev. De Witt.

Foreign News.

MADRID, May 10.

Dispatches from Tortosa are interpreted by Carlist bands to show that the insurgents are coming in and surrendering to the government troops.

It is generally thought the Spanish government is displeased at the action of France in allowing the remaining Carlists to escape into French territory and that the government at Versailles will be questioned thereto.

ATHENS, May 10.

Information of an explosion in the Lauria gunpowder in Tripolitza, Greece, when by a number of lives were lost, has been received. Twenty persons were instantly killed and many injured. It is feared that a number of the wounded will die.

LONDON, May 11.

The Times says the government of Germany is willing to negotiate with the government of France in view of a modifying the occupation of the French territory now occupied by Germans.

LONDON, May 10.

The Daily Gobe this evening, says it is rumored in trustworthy circles, that the negotiations between the British and American governments, with regard to the indirect claims, were send my broken off to-day in Parliament.

Tonight Granville in the House of Lords, and Gladstone in the House of Commons, promised that a statement of the condition of the negotiations would be made on Monday next, whether the papers were received or not.

Mr. Dobson was sworn in to-day as Privy Councellor.

Passengers from England now land in France without going through the usual formalities.

PARIS, May 10

The Carlists report that their greatest strength in Spain is in the province of Bascay, and news of an attack on Bilboa is expected daily.

The Temps has a dispatch stating that a column of Spanish troops which marched out of Bilboa was attacked and driven back by the insurgents. The same paper says: Trustworthy description of the affair at Orquita show that the official accounts greatly exaggerated its importance. Only the rear of the Carlist forces 1200 men was engaged and the prisoners taken by the government troops were nearly all inhabitants of Orquita, suspected of sympathizing with the insurrection. Of the Carlists actually in the fight 300 men were put hors de combat. Don Carlos has succeeded in joining his partizans. Two republicans are as yet quiet. There are 1,200 insurgents in the provinces of Gerona and 400 in that of Leyda.

Hear the more mendacious Milton of the St. Louis Democrat: "Know ye the land where the United States Commissioner will be at the ballot boxes for government men? Where the cage of the owners and other performers will be—in the location that cackleth their goose? O, wild as the accents of lovers' farewell are the prices they seek for the grounds they would sell."

Mr. Springer, of Terre Haute, is versatile. He married a couple, sold them furniture for their home, prescribed for the wife, acted as undertaker at her funeral, preached the sermon on the following Sunday, and has since remarried the bereaved widower. Why he didn't cut the corpse up for the dear departed, and thus make a complete job of it, we can't understand.

The Queen of England has sent a gold chronometer to Captain Frederick M. Tennent, of the American ship Liverpool, of New York, in recognition of services rendered by him to the master and crew of the British ship Europa, of Glasgow.

The mill and peaceful oyster, dropped from the bowels of the harmless earth is a cause of strife and discord between the two sister commonwealths of Maryland and Virginia. It now a penny from the former shore drops a rake, an armed tug boat from Virginia gobbles and rows her in.

A NARROW ESCAPE FROM FIRE—About four o clock yesterday afternoon a fire was discovered in the lot in rear of the Bush House stable, on the line of the property recently purchased by the city The material consisted of some straw shavings and plank The fire was promptly extinguished by the firemen who were in the Oil Drake Engine House at the time The cause of the fire was undoubtedly caused by children who were playing there with matches

MEETING OF THE FIRE DEPARTMENT—The members of the Fire Department held a meeting last evening for the purpose of taking into consideration certain alleged grievances A series of resolutions were passed, to be submitted to the Common Council at their next meeting There was no other business of importance transacted The resolutions are by request withheld from publication The meeting adjourned to meet on next Friday night

ROAD ROLLER FOR TITUSVILLE—We yesterday noticed a new road roller in front of the Titusville Manufacturing Company's Works, on Franklin street It is the property of Messrs Cadwallader & Warner, and was built for grading the roads on their property in the northern part of the city The roller weighs 3 000 pounds, and is composed of five iron wheels or pulleys on one axle, each being able to revolve independent of the other It stands about five feet high, 4½ feet wide, and will be drawn by two horses

The importance and economy of road rolling has been thoroughly demonstrated in England, France, and in our own eastern cities These rollers are of various weights, from two to five tons, depending upon the nature of the work to be done For the streets of Titusville and the roads leading out of the city, nothing could be of greater value in the absence of the wooden block pavements The philosophy of its action is extremely simple and well understood It forces the solid material into a compact and indurated mass, and squeezes the muddy or soluble matter to the surface from whence it is removed by carts After a street is well installed with good broken stone and thoroughly rolled, the annual expense of repairs is extremely trifling In fact the magnificent asphalt roads in Paris are fast giving way to the less expensive, and more substantial metalled roads In this country our most experienced engineers almost unanimously favor these roads in preference to the once popular wooden pavements both on account of their economy, their wear, and their healthiness Decaying wood which must sooner or later result from all wooden block pavements is a prime cause of disease, this fact alone will render their popularity of short duration The cost of a road roller suitable for our streets would be about $500, and it would be a valuable acquisition to our street department

Diamond Ink

Having heard so much about the virtues of the ink made by the Diamond Printing Ink Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa, this office concluded to order a supply, and has been using it a week or more with gratifying success, as the clear print of this paper will testify It fully meets all the manufacturers claim for it, is cheaper than others we have used, and is coming in general use all over the Western and Southern States This much we can say for "Diamond Ink," and we ask no better for newspaper job work—Dubuque Iowa Herald Feb 18 1872

The Herald gives us to only the general opinion of western publishers We have found the Diamond Ink Company's ink excellent, and more satisfactory than any we have used In making this comment we have in view the interest of our brother publishers in the west—St Louis Journal of Commerce

The Diamond ink has been used on the commercial for some time past, and gives entire satisfaction, not only to us but to those who read our clearly printed paper We can recommend it to journalists as excellent in quality and a great deal cheaper than printing inks manufactured for the east—Pittsburgh Commercial

We cheerfully add our testimony as to the quality of the Diamond Printing Ink Company's news ink We find it to be as good as the best, cheaper than the old establishments of the eastern cities, besides giving a saving of freight

POACHING LAW BREAKERS—We learn upon good authority, that certain well known parties have of late been swamping the trout streams in this neighborhood with nets during the night We can well understand why men devoid of honest sport manly spirit and a respect for the laws should choose the hours of darkness for the perpetration of such unmanly deeds But what we fail to see is, how men who have the rank of gentleman can be guilty of a crime which is nothing more nor less than poaching

The attention of all law-abiding men is called to the following section of the trout law, and in the case of those who thus disregard it a practical application of its penalties will probably prove beneficial, since such men are generally more effectually influenced by an appeal to their pockets than to their honor

"TROUT"

No person or persons shall at any time with intent so to do, catch any speckled brook trout or any speckled river trout with any device save only a hook and line, under a penalty of $5 00 for each trout so caught or had in his possession

The only reservation in the above, is in the case of parties catching trout for the purpose of stocking other waters, and this can be done only when the brooks from which they are taken belong to the parties themselves

SOTHERN AS DUNDREARY—One of the finest entertainments that has ever been given in Titusville, was the "American Cousin," with S Thorn as Dundreary, at the Opera-house last night The character of a titled English swell was admirably rendered, and drew from the audience great applause The scene in the bed room and the reading of Sam s letter were especially rich also the country scene in the garden, which was full of wit and drollery The support was also very good—more particularly Bishop as Asa Trenchard, and Miss Nellie Kemp, as Florence We hope they will have a better house to night, one that in point of numbers will be more worthy of the talent displayed

METHODIST CHURCH SOCIABLE—The sociable at the Methodist church last evening was quite largely attended, not merely by members of that denomination, but by the public generally Ample justice was done to the supper provided for the occasion, and the ladies who graced the tables rendered themselves agreeably attentive to the visitors The sociable was a decided success in every particular, and thoroughly enjoyed by all present

A SLIGHT MISTAKE—About 7 o'clock last evening a boy about ten years of age informed Policeman Miller that two men had been murdered in Abbott's Grove Upon proceeding to the grove the officer discovered that a fight had occurred between four drunken Swedes, and two of them had been lying in the woods dead drunk, but before he reached the spot they had resuscitated and gone after another drink

Trouting in the Wilderness.

In the course of our wanderings we have spent many a pleasant season in the wilderness of Northern New York, the Canadian frontier and the great West A summer passed in the woods much all the delightful relaxation of camp life, far excels to our taste the dress and dissipation incident upon a trip to any of the fashionable watering places In place of the dust and heat we have the cool forest breeze For the chatter of voices, the solitude of nature, unbroken save by the murmur of leaves and the calls of the wood denizens. Dressed in easy, comfortable clothing, we can slack a deer or cast a fly at pleasure, and at night, worn and weary with manly toil, our sleep brings refreshment to mind and body alike

Down east, in the State of Vermont, a stream comes down from the mountains by the side of which we have spent many pleasant days This is water known only to a few, and as they are genuine sportsmen who would scorn to take a fish by any but fair means, the pools are full of trout, not little miserable fry of a finger's length, but strong lusty fellows that make a hard fight for their lives, and tax the skill of the fisher and the quality of his tackle to the uttermost Well do we remember the soft April morning with its overcast sky, when bound for a two day's fish, we halted at the mouth of the gorge below "the basin," and pointed a Conroy red that had been tried many a time and oft before On the other side of the stream was our old friend John, than whom a better sportsman never struck a fish, or looked along a pair of brown barrels on the track of a fall cock Carefully we approached the edge, and with an underhand cast John threw his flies upon the dark, sullen water near some overhanging bushes, whilst I followed suit on my side, but just as my cast struck the surface, I heard the singing of a reel, and saw that John had hooked a fish Just then the wind ruffled near my fall fly, and with a gleam of gold and colors a trout struck So fierce was his first rush, when he felt the prick of the barb, that he ran off some twenty yards of line ere the drag began to tell, then slowly he turned, giving me time to reel in and be ready for his next effort soon it came, and time and again it was repeated, till worn out, at last he gave up, and I drew him to the bank, shaking his head as if he would turn out the hook.

John to, saved his fish and drew well, the basin' seven not one of which would weigh less than a half pound, were in our creels We followed the stream up between the hills and every rippled pool some spot where, under a log or rock, a speckled beauty lay in wait for his meal To all of these we dropped a line of invitation, by some it was accepted able and by others refused Still, too, proved equal to the occasion, and vanquished as in the battle, one, as we remember, carrying off with him our cast ing lines and flies Still the creels grew heavier as the day wind and we climbed higher and higher up the gorge At last hearing John, who was trying to induce a fish which he had once pricked to rise again We paused on, and turning skirted to the left as the stream made a bend, we came upon one of the most beautiful spots we ever remember to have seen In the foreground the hills receded, enclosing a small level and almost circular piece of ground on which the turf was smooth and green, and through the center of which the brook rushed merrily along The hillsides were covered with dark pine, and here and there large gray rocks jutted out boldly Directly in our front the hills approached each other again, completely closing the gorge by a wall of solid rock about twenty feet high, over the top of which the stream poured in a bright, glistening sheet Just at the foot of the fall the water had hollowed out a deep and broad cavity around which a thick fringe of trees and bushes clustered As we approached this, a sight greeted our eyes the memory of which even yet causes our blood to tingle From under a projecting rock rose an enormous trout, Quietly, as if confident in his strength, he came to the top of the water, gave one grand hop, and then sank back, leaving the surface covered with bubbles that slowly sailed away on either hand With the utmost caution we drew near and made a cast directly over the spot where he had gone down Again and again we cast the lure, but he either did not feel hungry or distrusted the appearance, though the select one off red him was of as killing a nature as possible At last we substituted a mallard for a palmer and made one more last effort, and not in vain, for hardly had the fly struck the water when with a rush he came and leaping clear of the surface showed us all his brilliant colors, then with a wave of his broad tail, he sank back into his native element Instantly we gave him the butt and with a twang like a harp string the line responded and fixed the hook firmly Quick as thought the fish dove and the whir of the reel rang out sharp and clear not for an instant did he pause, but turning as he reached the bottom he darted straight for a shelter beneath the roots of huge oak It was no time to hesitate, for if he once made his point he would have broken the line, or rubbed the hook out of his jaw Again we gave him the butt with the reel full stopped The strain was terrible, the line stretched to the uttermost and the rod bent like a whip, for a few seconds the result was a matter of doubt, but gradually the fish gave way and at last settled on the bottom Resting in all the line we could, we took a position, and knowing it would not do to allow him to gain breath and strength we roused him with a strong steady drag twice he refused to move but the third time he made another rush and springing clear of the water tried to throw himself upon the line and tear out the hook, but by carefully watching him we anticipated and thwarted his intention then finding all his tricks useless he gathered his energies for a last desperate battle For over half an hour he kept up, rush following rush, and leap succeeding leap but through it all the bamboo and silk met him fairly, and at last finding himself overmatched he came sullenly up to the bank just as John made his appearance, who quickly slipped a landing net under him, and the next instant as fine a 3½ pound trout as ever stretched a line lay gasping upon the grass

Thinking we had done enough for the day, and being now near the branch of the stream down which we intended to fish on the morrow, we determined to camp here over night From the pockets of our fishing jackets we produced the small supply of stores which with broiled trout was to constitute our supper John ran up a rude shelter of pine boughs, whilst I built a fire, and soon had the fish cooking upon hot stones. A sportsman's appetite is ever of the keenest, and we I indeed did we enjoy that meal After it we spent an hour with our pipes talking over many a past adventure of flood and field, then turned in, and with the silent stars looking down upon us slept the sleep of the weary, till the rising sun warned us to be up and doing.

Our Rouseville Letter

ROUSEVILLE, May 10, '72

Editors Morning Herald

We have had what some of our sporting gentry would term a very dull time for the past week We have had nary fight, nary fire, nary sensation, no sir nothing to disturb the even tenor of our ways And yet this dullness is entirely owing to the good effects which the teachings of our different church s have on the community, and we can proudly boast that Rouseville is the most moral and respectable town on Oil Creek, in proportion to its size We possess at present four churches of different denominations viz Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal, and Baptist, also four lodges viz Masonic, Odd Fellows', Knights of Pythias and the order of the Red Men, which are all in a flourishing condition and the members of those churches and also of those lodges, are the most influential and respectable citizens of our town, and are always found engaged in some good work which is calculated to improve the appearance or morality of Rouseville and vicinity

I shall give you two instances of the ungrateful treatment of one of the most self sacrificing and philanthropic humanitarians at Franklyn, and in doing so I will also give you a sketch of some of the good works of this most modest and unassuming gentleman, which have lately come to light much against his wishes as he is a very sensitive person, and does not care to have his good deeds blazoned forth to the public.

This gentleman is named J D Gage, and has been a resident of Rouseville for some years He came here in very impoverished circumstances, but by the excellence of his talent as a very artistic cutcher, and by an exhibition of honesty and sobriety, (qualities quite unknown in this region some years ago,) he began to grow into comfortable circumstances, and was able to extend his business so very materially and took in a partner Then it was that he became a terror to evil doers, as he could devote more of his time to the good work of christianizing our community, Somewhere about twelve months ago, he had one of our Hebrew citizens, named Jacobs, arrested for defiling the Sabbath by selling cigars, for which he was fined by our Squire This raised the Dutch in Jacobs, who was a new arrival, and he became determined to get square with the good Mr Gage In a few weeks after he had Mr Gage arrested for killing cattle on a Sunday, but this Mr Gage showed to be impossible, as he clearly proved an alibi being at church praying at the killing time, but Mr Gage's prayer was the transgressor and although Mr Gage got his share of the profits in the concern, he never had enquired into the "killing" business since he was blessed with his vocation for this "noble work" And yet the magistrate could not see the point, but fined Mr Gage $10 and costs

Again last fall Mr Gage had a man named Carrier (who keeps a disorderly house and grocery) arrested for violating the liquor law on our different charges Carrier went to Gage and asked him not to prosecute him as he was a poor man and not enjoying good health, and said if he was fined his wife would have to earn the fine as he was unable to work This had such an effect on the good Mr Gage that he withdrew three of the charges and only brought one before the Grand Jury, which the Grand Jury in the most unbecoming manner took no cognizance of further than placing the cost on Mr Gage, although it was proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that Carrier sold Ginger beer This, of course, annoyed the good Mr Gage, who proceeded to Carrier if he would pay the cost he would not prosecute any more This Carrier very ungracefully refused to do, and so Mr Gage had him before the last term of court for selling liquor without a license, but juries are stubborn people and they found Carrier not guilty and made Gage pay one fourth of the costs and Carrier the remainder

Now this certainly must have been very heart-rending to Mr Gage, who has engaged in this "noble work" simply for good, as all other actions of his life testify We must, indeed, be in need of instruction when we cannot see the purity of Mr Gage's motives Does he not come from Cherrytree Run where he resides on the McCloy farm, of which he owns a part to one of our churches on Sundays to teach our children how to walk in the paths of rectitude, and is never at always at hand to remonstrate against liquor dealers and other nuisances, when this hurt his high-strung feelings? I imagine this inhabitants of Rouseville, in place of finding fault with Mr Gage, ought to consider him an honor to our community, in possessing the fortitude to brave the censure of our people so meekly and with such an amount of Christian resignation as he exhibits in the prosecution of his "noble work"

Capt McKay, who applied for an hotel license last term of court, and who was remonstrated against very strongly by a number of our prominent citizens, was granted his license on Wednesday The remonstrance was not, because of any particular objection to McKay, but because those gentlemen wished to do away with liquor selling in our town completely, but when they saw the licenses to the other hotels granted, and that McKay, who was just as worthy, was being made a political scapegoat, they sent in a petition asking that his might be also granted, which was done and this was only right, as the Captain has always kept a very orderly house, and has always every kind of accommodations for such as livery stables, &c, and he has been at a great amount of expense in enlarging and fitting up the old "Petrol Um House" so that it now looks the prettiest and most comfortable house in Rouseville, and the Captain has also the reputation of being a very gentlemanly landlord and a most obliging and well conducted citizen, and by his straightforward and urbane disposition is sure of making the Petroleum House a favorite retreat for our traveling public

Messrs. Dodd and Frazer & Co who have had a new still constructed for refining oil known as "Cronin s Patent" are busy at work getting it up, so that they are confident of being all to rights qualities within two weeks This still is of a very curious build, showing a vast amount of ingenuity in its construction, and if it becomes a success it will completely revolutionize the present mode of manufacturing stills

The patentee claims the following advantages for his invention

1 To keep the bottom clear of all sediment while running

2 To draw off the tar while running, and thereby keep the still constantly running

3 A great saving of coal, and a sure prevention of burning the bottom

4 The use of a less amount of chemicals to prepare the distillate for market

If it possesses all these properties it will benefit the producer to a great extent, and drive all such monopolies as the "South Improvement Company" from the market, and also confine all the refining interest to its legitimate position, viz. Oil Creek

We will have the pleasure of seeing J W Carner in his wonderful representation of Rip Van Winkle, on Monday, 13th We cannot forget his last representation here, and the amount of artistic ability he displays in this his masterpiece Carner as Rip is not many steps behind Jefferson His representation is capable of bearing just as severe criticism He acts the kind hearted but dissipated Dutchman as natural as if he were indeed that tadgered individual, and he exhibits in the last of some of the finest and most affecting acting we have ever witnessed We have seen J Herson at Booth's, but we would just as soon see Carner on the same stage He is sure of receiving a bumper at Rouseville this time as usual

Mr Tryon who is be is considered a very prominent man in our community, has lately been sold out by the Sheriff. He owned an half share in our two largest hotels, and also carried on a very extensive hardware business We expect he will come out all right, and start up as lively as ever in a short time

Yours, &, BUSHWHACKER.

OIL REFINERS MEETING—The oil refiners of Pittsburgh, New York, Philadelphia and Cleveland held a meeting yesterday on Dupont street Way, for the purpose of considering measures to reduce the freight on crude oil, so as to put it into exporters in and large quantities to Antwerp Under the existing rate in the crude oil can be shipped to Antwerp and refined and sold as cheaply as it is here In order to compel the Antwerp dealers to purchase the refined oil, each refiner, the leading refiners of the United States are anxious that a freight tariff on crude oil be considerably increased According to the statement made by the Directors this is exactly the object which the late South Improvement Company had in view—Pittsburgh Gazette

GRANDMAMMA'S BIRTHDAY

There are red young lips on a wrinkled cheek,
Counting out grandmamma's birthday there,
Eighty, the years that the klasses speak—
And now there's a hand on the snowy hair,

"Why! grandmamma, really it seemed to me
I never never could reach the end,
How awfully tired you must be
To have had the eighty years to spend"

"So I've been thinking, my little son,
The years seemed never so long before
As when, in counting them one by one,
Your lips touched lovingly at fourscore.

"But God has given me strength for all—
All the way to the eightieth stair
I'm resting on it, ready to fall
Softly asleep on the breast of Prayer"

A Pretty Record for a President.

Harper's Weekly.

We invite all thoughtful American citizens to consider the influences that nominated Mr. Greeley, known to none so well as to the best men in the Convention; then to consider his attitude during the war, when the real character of every was tried. He would have allowed the States to decide whether they would secede. He sorely perplexed the opening of Mr Lincoln's Administration, forcing the army into the field before it was ready. He begged Mr Lincoln to try to buy peace by paying for the slaves. He represented Mr Lincoln's action in the Niagara Conference, in a manner which Mr Lincoln declared put him in a false position before the country. He signed a letter to the loyal Governors after Mr Lincoln was renominated in 1864 substantially asking whether he should not be set aside and a new candidate selected. Consider such facts as these, occurring at moments of great national exigency, and decide what would have changed had Horace Greeley been in the place of Abraham Lincoln.

If there is one quality which is indispensible in a President, it is sound judgment. If there is one public man who is totally destitute of it, it is Horace Greeley. A certain kindly feeling with which he is regarded will not blind the country to his natural unfitness for the office to which he has been nominated.

Rich deposits of mineral paint, says the Indiana Democrat, have recently been discovered in Indiana. The quality is superior to the French and Italian imported. A company has been formed, and extensive works are being erected to prepare the paint for the market.

The toothpick factory in Canton, Maine, furnishes more work than all other business in the town. Over one hundred cords of poplar have been hauled for its use this season, and converted into toothpicks. Each of the machines used will, it is said, make 5,000 toothpicks a minute.

The Legislative Committee of the New York Assembly, which investigated the Immigrant Commission in New York city, reported yesterday that a large number of abuses had been discovered, and recommended the passage of an act creating a new board.

A London special to New York says that "Messager," a four-year old French bred horse, won the great Northamptonshire candicap on Tuesday, at the Northampton races.

MORTAR FOR BRICK WORK

MORTAR FOR STONE WORK,

MORTAR FOR PLASTERING

FURNISHED BY

CHAS. CARSON,

At his mortar mill at the Mortar Mill, corner of Washington st and Oil Creek R R.

The mortar for the mortar is proportioned by men of experience. They are of the best quality and ground thoroughly—far better than can be done by hand in the old fashioned and expensive way, and can be supplied in Large Quantities on Short Notice.

For the last two years I have furnished the Mortar for various buildings, among them the Pithole Hall Block. Read the following remarks

ABOUT LIME, SAND, AND PROPORTIONS FOR MORTARS

Most men know that the lime and sand are the common ingredients in mortar, but there are several proportions and qualities of each, and that the right proportions and qualities of each, when properly selected and properly tempered, will form a cement as enduring as granite. But very few know how to select the materials, or how to temper them. If we know how they should be made, let us see the truth of the matter.

Lime and sand are used in mortars for two purposes, first, to form a cement to hold the brick or stone together, and second, to form a mass to fill out the spaces between the brick or stone. Now, if we know that the lime and sand are of the right quality, we know that the cement will be firm, and lasting, even under the water, but if we know that it should be strong, we must know how to select the materials, and
